2026-A

Proposal for the FSC that the other Home Groups share in payment for the PO Box, for the Anonymi Foundation and the FSC

Intent: So one Group is not doing more than their fair share. All Groups should participate in paying for the service, for the FSC and the Anonymi Foundation that they created.

2026-B

To approve the IP Concerning Relapse

Intent: This IP is on Groups literature tables. It has been through literature conferences, and we have not received any more input for this IP. So it's time for approval.

2026-C

To approve One Addict's Experience with Group Conscience through the Steps

Intent: This booklet is being used throughout the fellowship to learn from one of our members of their accumulated understanding and experience. There has been no input for corrections on misspelling or run-on sentences. It is presented to approve this literature written by one of our members. It is consistent with our message and does not violate any Steps or Traditions.

REPORT LEGAL STATUS

Last year's Conference we talked about the legal status and what entity would suit us best. There was a presentation about the PMA model and how it might suit us. The information about this can be found on the webpage: <https://nahelp.org/anonymi-foundation>

There have been some questions and concerns from members that reached out to us whether this is the right direction for us. There was a need expressed to look into it deeper and come to the Conference to discuss the issue. It is up to the Groups to take the responsibility and direct the Anonymi Agent on how to move forward in this matter. Without direction no action will be taken.

If Groups or member have any input please contact me as your agent. This can be done by phone or e-mail, and all the input that is sent in will be discussed and presented at the Conference. Looking forward to come together and seeing all of you in June!

Tools versus Goal: The Hardest Truth in Recovery

When I want something and have to work for it, I'm usually fine with that. But I want to see results. What is the payoff for every step I take? In fact, I can become obsessive about the outcome. It is not entirely illogical, then, that I feel quite a bit of resistance when I'm writing yet another Step 1 inventory. What is my actual goal in working the steps? A spiritual awakening? A new life? Freedom? I feel a lot of resistance when I think about it. It's so intangible, so vague. And yet, I want it. Badly. I want it as fast as possible, and that is a misconception.

A hard truth I have to accept is this: The reward lies in the action. I want "Freedom" and a "New Life," but those promises are too vague to get me out of bed every day. The steps and the tools are there to give me immediate results. If I use the tools daily, I am not rewarded with a vague end goal, but with direct results. The simplest example? When I feel lonely or desperate, the tool is simple: I seek connection. I go to a meeting or I call someone. The reward follows immediately: I break the isolation and I feel better.

Recovery is not something you achieve; it is something you maintain. It's comparable to physical training: you don't go to the gym to be "done" with exercise. You go to keep your body in condition. Working the 12 steps and using the tools is the strength training for my soul. The truth is "hard" because it hits our deepest survival mechanisms and our natural tendency toward control right in the face. In recovery, this truth means a confrontation with a number of painful realities:

1. The end of the quick fix
2. The loss of the illusion of control
3. The responsibility lies entirely with me
4. It is never "finished"

That the truth is hard does not, fortunately, mean it is cruel. Precisely in that hardness lies a solid foundation. If I make my recovery dependent on a vague goal in the future, then today I am still a victim of my feelings. But if the reward is in the action, I have regained my agency. I don't have to wait until I am "spiritually awakened" to feel better. I only have to use that one tool. The moment I do, the pressure falls away. The freedom I long for so much is not at the end of the ride, but in the moments I decide not to keep struggling on my own. I only have to take the next small step. That is enough. And that is where the real peace begins.

An anonymous addict from the Netherlands

Total Abstinence, the Philosophy of Narcotics Anonymous

To get a good understanding of why Narcotics Anonymous believes in Total Abstinence, it is important to see Narcotics Anonymous for what it is: a program that stands on its own.

In our society there are several definitions of addiction, and there are different paths of recovery and treatment. Narcotics Anonymous has its own philosophy regarding what addiction is, what recovery means, and what is needed for it.

Narcotics Anonymous sees addiction as a disease that affects every area of our lives. If you think you have a drug problem, you probably do. “An addict is simply a man or woman whose whole life is controlled by drugs.”

So in NA we do not believe that an addict is to be defined by what or how much someone used. “As addicts, we are people for whom the use of any mind- or mood-altering substance causes problems in every area of our lives.”

In Narcotics Anonymous we speak of a physical, mental, emotional, and spiritual disease. At its deepest level it is a spiritual problem that requires a spiritual solution. The core of the problem is self-centredness. In Dutch, it can only partially be translated with the word egocentrisme. This is what the Twelve Steps of NA aim for: a personality change based on the learning and application of spiritual principles such as honesty, surrender, willingness, faith, hope, acceptance, and more.

The problem therefore stands apart from trauma, past events, missing substances in our brains, environmental factors, feelings, relationships, etc. Even though our disease has influence through and on all these areas, since it lives inside of us. It is our reaction to life that makes us addicts.

Jimmy Kinnon described clearly what addiction is NOT, namely: addiction is not freedom, personal growth, goodwill, and not a way of life. Recovery in Narcotics Anonymous therefore includes all of these aspects.

Recovery in NA is about finding freedom on all fronts. Freedom from drugs, freedom from our destructive patterns, freedom from our past, freedom to live, and the freedom to make choices. From day one in NA we are made responsible for our recovery and our lives—not without help. The members of NA are there to help the newcomer and to guide them in working the Twelve Steps. The Steps bring about a personality change and reveal all that stands in the way of our personal growth. We find a way to deal with obsession, compulsion, fear, depression, suicidal thoughts, anger, sleeplessness, etc.—things which, in regular mental-health care, are quickly treated with therapy methods and prescribed substances. In Narcotics Anonymous we see these matters as symptoms of our disease, not as problems in themselves that must be treated separately.

Many treatment methods take away our freedom. The message that you need something in order to live is by definition not freedom. It is addiction, in a new form, meant to take away the consequences of the problems we caused ourselves in our addiction.

Sometimes our responsibility is taken away because institutions remove the consequences of what we have done ourselves. That quickly traps us again in the illusion that “everything will be fine again.” Little personal growth takes place by the time we leave the institution or treatment and face the world again. Many addicts go in and out of institutions for that reason.

The philosophy of Narcotics Anonymous is that from day one we can again become a productive member of society. When someone walks into an NA meeting, the NA message is: welcome home! You never have to use again. And we also believe that you no longer need to go anywhere else. For many recovering addicts in Narcotics Anonymous, this was their last option. They had tried everything, but only found answers in Narcotics Anonymous. If that was true for them, it is certainly true for people who have not yet tried everything.

That is a different message from: “you need another admission, you must leave your environment and go into a safe house, you need therapy, you must take something to be able to sleep, you need medication for this or that, you need structure, you must process your traumas or you won’t move forward, you must end your relationship,” and so on.

Although well-meant and not bad ideas by themselves, these pieces of advice contain one problem: they imply that staying clean and changing cannot be done without these things, and that recovery or change is required in these areas in order to get or stay clean. In Narcotics Anonymous, however, we believe the opposite. Staying clean is a requirement for recovery—regardless of what happens. There is no longer any reason to use; it is a choice, not something we can justify by hiding behind external factors or situations. The first thing we do is get clean; everything else follows in every area of our lives.

Within NA the message is: keep coming back, use your phone, read the literature, and don't use no matter what happens! Everything is directed at taking direct responsibility for your problem and for the solution, and when we do that, the solution is immediately there. Namely, people with the same experience who are always willing to share what you need to hear at that moment to get through the moment or the day. It gives an addict the chance, with the help of others, to take charge of what is happening right now and to grow from day one, day by day.

Narcotics Anonymous offers a way of life, just like many religions, spiritual movements, and other communities do. It is a way of life that worked for people who found no solution anywhere else for their problem: the disease of addiction.

In our contact with institutions and professionals, our goal is not to impose or elevate our philosophy and way of recovery above theirs.

Narcotics Anonymous arose from the need that addicts felt because they found no answers anywhere else for their problem. In our literature it says that religion, psychiatry, and medical science had no answers that worked for us. The people in NA were desperate. Many addicts who come to NA nowadays are not. That's not a bad thing, and the Twelve Steps work for every addict who is willing to surrender to them.

The philosophy of NA has not changed among us. However, in mainstream NA in the Netherlands and beyond it certainly has. The philosophy has started to move along with the views of treatment institutions and scientific insights. These stand, on several points, in direct opposition to our philosophy. In practice, you now often see simplified extractions of the Twelve Steps in an attempt to capture and present the essence in a simpler way so it's more graspable for their clients. In reality, the deeper problem is often denied and with it the chance for a real, deeper change is taken away.

An example: the philosophy of NA is that there is no chemical solution for a spiritual problem. To undergo the spiritual change that the NA Steps offer, the mind must be open. A clouded mind—by any substance—is not. Today in many meetings you sit surrounded by addicts who use all kinds of prescribed medication and justify it because the medical world prescribes it. It is tempting to hold on to something that gives security, and also necessary when there is not yet an alternative. We hold on to it because we have been told we need it—because of who we are, what we have, or what we are missing. The idea of letting go is frightening, unless you believe it's possible and that there is an alternative. We did not have this alternative before we found Narcotics Anonymous. And at this moment, it appears that Narcotics Anonymous is one of the few places on earth where total abstinence from all mind- and mood-altering substances is still believed in. This is not an opinion about medication or treatment methods, nor a denial of their usefulness for those who benefit from them. It is a philosophy regarding the recovery from addiction, for addicts who identify with the disease of addiction as we see it. It is not for everyone—that is the hard reality.

Nowadays, addiction is often discussed together with mental health issues. There is much talk about dual diagnoses. This opens the door to various treatments for addiction along with treatments for other mental problems. However, in Narcotics Anonymous we believe that addicts have no control over anger, fear, resentment, depression, and many more “mental problems” as a result of the disease of addiction. It is an expression of a deeper spiritual problem for which we have found an answer in the principles of the Twelve Steps. We also believe that our character defects, which manifest in mental and emotional unmanageability, have been strengthened by our drug use. And that we have to face them.

Narcotics Anonymous is a path that works for every addict who wants to fully surrender to it. Narcotics Anonymous is there for every addict who wants it—not for those who just need it. Mental health care is full of people who need it but don't want it.

Nevertheless, NA is also a path you can reject—it is not for everyone, and that's a good thing. Because we must be able to choose it freely. NA is not a religion or cult that tells you what your problem is or what to do. But if you are looking for our philosophy about our problem and the solution we have found, we will share it freely with you and be there to help you walk this path.

“By staying clean and working the Steps, we rebuild our broken personalities.”

By using substances to suppress these symptoms, we take away the necessity to change. When we take something for depression or fear, the necessity to explore why we are depressed or afraid disappears immediately.

At the same time, we say in Narcotics Anonymous that we are not doctors or psychiatrists. And when people are on prescribed medication, have found this program as a possible fitting alternative, and want to explore it for themselves, we advise them to contact their health-care provider so they can together make a plan to find a way of life without substances.

In NA we therefore believe that the drug is a symptom. When we get clean, it becomes clear why we used and why we kept returning to drugs or substitutes. It is necessary to face this in order to see, acknowledge, and hand over the destructive side of our life patterns to the care of those around us. And to learn to live by spiritual principles together with others who do the same. Taking prescribed medication removes that necessity and replaces our own drugs with another substance that keeps our lives “manageable.” Furthermore, taking prescribed medication reinforces the illusion that there is another problem besides addiction that has no solution except taking the medication. This makes it harder to recognize our actual problem, as we can quickly blame the symptoms on a label we have been given.

The pharmaceutical industry and medical science continue calmly, and for every newly named problem a new method or substance is introduced. This will not stop. Meanwhile, we may have reached a point in history where an NA meeting is the only space you can walk into and hear a message of total abstinence. This is something hopeful, because nowhere else do you hear that you need nothing and that things can get better. I believe it is almost too good to be true—and for many, unfortunately, it is. We often fall for false promises, more attractively packaged, promising quicker results, or taking away our responsibility by blaming something external that can be fixed externally. What a powerful message we have: that every addict can get clean, lose the desire to use, and find a new way of life. Hope and freedom—that is what it’s about.

Unfortunately, it’s different at many Narcotics Anonymous meetings. At the average mainstream NA meeting you no longer hear this message. There is a great lack of the First Step in the lives of many recovering addicts. When we still pursue something outside ourselves to solve our problem, we’re circling around Steps 1, 2, and 3. Our understanding is then too limited regarding what the disease of addiction is, how all our unmanageability can be traced back to self-centredness, compulsion, and obsession, and we deny the need for a power greater than ourselves and surrender to it. And because we do not truly face and acknowledge our problem, we keep searching for ways to fight the symptoms. That is why many people with several years clean still turn to therapy, religion, prescribed medication, or end their lives. It is despair wrapped in a new attempt at a solution. We justify using other methods or escapes by saying we've "tried NA," but the reality is that we only dealt with the surface and have not yet looked deeply enough to face our powerlessness and recognize our need for a power greater than ourselves that can help us. This is written in our literature. The Twelve Steps of NA are a way of life, not a course or program of a few months. When we suffer, it is because of the way we live; our program gives a way to examine and change that.

It is wonderful to see how our literature speaks about exactly what we see happening daily in our meetings and in the lives of recovering addicts in Narcotics Anonymous. Our philosophy is real, and the addict and our disease have not changed in all this time. Society has—and also the way addiction is viewed and treated. At many meetings in NA, we no longer stand for the philosophy that was originally present, a philosophy that created freedom in the lives of many people who were once hopelessly addicted to drugs. The recovering addicts who believed enough in this Program to share their experience, start meetings, write our book, and stand up for a way of life that works for our kind of people! They passed it on because it works—not to change it into something it is not. And unfortunately, that has happened.

There are many reasons for this. The biggest, I think, is the disease we deal with: our shortcomings and character defects, the fact that we are human and instead of living by principles, we follow our own will. Our lack of recovery clouds the path for the addict who now and in the future seeks it. When money or power become important, the principles this program is based on fade. If we do not undergo the personality change the Steps speak of, we have nothing to offer the addicts after us.

If we believe in the philosophy of NA, we only have to stand for it. Not by preaching or forcing it, but by living it and passing it on. We are here to show addicts who seek recovery a path—not to reject their way. If we keep living the NA way, others can join. The addicts who feel attracted to our philosophy and our way of recovering from the disease of addiction.

Miracle Workers

Was thinking about a phrase heard often that can be disastrous for addicts if not understood correctly. Ego and its abuse are how addicts fall into the traps the disease wants us to. We can start thinking that we are in control over and over again. We forget that it is all an illusion that reality is of our own control we never will find serenity. We will get some feelings of peace but if we forget that the miracles are possible because of surrender we will return to insanity. Each of us that shares our experience, strength and hope with other addicts that helps them feel the gift of empathy are miracle workers. We share the miracle that there is a new way of life that is possible when we surrender. It is made possible because of our Greater Power. Our will has us out there using, selfish, and insane. Those of us who have become miracles by sticking and staying until the miracle of our message happening have to give credit where it is due. If we start thinking I did this we are doomed to repeat the insanity of when we tried controlling our lives before. So be a miracle worker and share the Gratitude that WE have found that “an addict, any addict can stop using, find the desire to stop using again, and find a new way to live” is possible. There are too many walking dead out there that need to know not everyone just wants to eat their brains. WE CARE and that is made possible for those of us that had no empathy for anyone else because a loving, caring Greater Power has made it possible.

Cult

“Narcotics Anonymous is a cult.” It’s something people say from time to time. My opinion is that, if NA were truly a cult, it would be a rather poor one and we wouldn’t get the most out of it. And I say that with a wink.

Still, this is quite a strong statement to make, and it’s important to take it seriously when people say it. The first question that needs answering is: what must a group meet to be labeled a cult?

Researchers and support organizations often look at a combination of characteristics, such as:

- Charismatic, authoritarian leader who can barely be critically questioned.
- Strong control over members’ lives: relationships, finances, living, work, information.
- Us-versus-them thinking: only the group itself holds the truth or salvation; outsiders are wrong, lost or hostile.
- Isolation from family, friends, and society, physically or socially (breaking contact, relying only on internal sources).

- Use of deception or pressure (psychological, emotional, financial) to attract or keep people inside.

Let's go through these characteristics.

One sign of a cult is that there is often a charismatic, authoritarian leader who can barely be critically questioned. In NA, we do encounter people with strong personalities at times. However, our Traditions run counter to the idea that one person should have power over others. In fact, our Traditions state that decisions must be made based on group conscience, not personal opinion or ego.

Another sign is strong control over members' lives. Think of relationships, finances, living situation, work, etc. It's true that we try to help each other in all these areas and share our experiences about decisions. Still, everyone is free to make their own choices. It's your life, and no one can compel you to do or not do something. We work with sponsors, and a sponsor can certainly provide guidance in these areas. But a good sponsor would never force you to do or not do something.

Many of us are so wary of being controlled—perhaps due to past experiences or our attachment to self-reliance—that any well-meant suggestion can feel controlling. This is something to work through rather than a sign that others truly seek control. It's actually mature to follow directions from someone you trust and whose care and experience you can lean on.

Cults also often show us-versus-them thinking—the idea that only the group has the truth and salvation. You might hear this in NA as well, for instance that the world outside NA also needs NA. People new to NA, or those who have been involved for a while, start to notice that it works and that it's nice to belong somewhere. That 'we' feeling can become a solution in itself, rather than a base from which to meet the world. Within NA, you'll sometimes hear that this is the only thing that works, but it's crucial to see the context. This is the experience of people who designed and passed on the program: they looked elsewhere for answers, didn't find them, until they found each other at NA. That's a statement about NA and those for whom it works, not about everything outside NA. It does not mean there is no truth or salvation beyond NA, nor does NA claim this.

Another sign of a cult is members being isolated from family, friends, and society, both physically and socially. NA often suggests you break away from your old life, especially from people who still use drugs or environments that are no longer healthy for you. This is simply about staying clean. If you're allergic to trees, you shouldn't walk in the woods. It's common sense, not

NA trying to isolate you from family or society. In fact, NA's philosophy is to help us become productive members of society again, ideally from the start. We can be of value to our environment, neighbors, family, and friends—but for this, recovery is necessary, and one requirement is staying clean. Sometimes that means taking distance from unhealthy relationships or environments that society considers normal, but which are unhealthy for us.

Cults also often use deception or pressure (psychological, emotional, financial) to get or keep people involved. Aside from the fact that people in NA may, out of shortcomings, be manipulative or dishonest, nobody is pressured. Although we may experience this because we want you involved, and we say something if you isolate yourself, everyone is free to come and go as they wish in NA. That's central to the philosophy and structure of our fellowship.

One key point for us in NA is to ensure people truly feel and know that choosing to be part of this and to recover is their own choice. Our literature states clearly that imposed morality doesn't work. We can point to tools, the Steps and Traditions, the importance of action and principles, but people will only engage when there is a genuine desire and readiness. If we pressure, impose things, or guilt-trip someone out of our own self-satisfaction before that point, we risk that they never make that choice. They may leave, and on the way out say this is a cult—the perfect rationalisation to walk out the door. It's easy for us to then say they didn't want it anyway. But perhaps we were impatient, or wanted others to do what we do so we feel better about ourselves. In my experience, it always has two sides when someone leaves. While we aren't responsible for anyone's choice, we are responsible for how we treat someone, for the atmosphere at meetings, and for the way we deliver our message.

Narcotics Anonymous is a spiritual program—not religious, and not a cult. That’s worth remembering. Humans naturally turn helpful things into a religion once they find something that works for them. It’s tempting to morph it into rules and dogma: a lifestyle we then present as the way and the right way to recover. That can be pleasant, but the downside is people may feel guilty if they don’t fit the image.

Doing the tools daily says nothing about how we live. It’s possible to apply the steps and still treat a newcomer at the door with total self-centeredness. That’s the danger of religion: ticking boxes without real change.

We need to live the principles to recover. That’s the solution NA has to offer. The best way to help people to live those principles is to embody them, not to preach. When our way of living is something addicts want, we can show how we found it—so they may choose it of their own free will.

CONCERNING RELAPSE

RECOVERY: RESTORATION OR RETURN TO ANY FORMER AND BETTER STATE OR CONDITION.

Recovery in NA from the disease of addiction is a result of practicing principles in all our affairs.

Recovery happens when we surrender to spiritual principles.

Abstinence does not equal recovery. Recovery is working the Steps, finding out who we are, and learning to live. Recovery must be worked on a daily basis, or relapse can happen.

The Twelve Steps help us to experience recovery. We don't use; we call our sponsor regularly, attend meetings daily, have a Home Group, and work Steps in our lives. We are on a path of recovery.

The difference for us between now and then is complete surrender to the process of recovery. We had come to believe that we are addicts with the disease of addiction who must change everything in order to recover. To change, we work the Twelve Steps and admit that this is about recovery, not perfection. We must remain teachable.

Since our early introduction to recovery, many questions needed to be answered. For example, what is recovery, and how do you maintain it? The answer is to not participate in any area of our disease. This starts with complete abstinence from all mind or mood-altering chemicals, including drug replacement therapy medications (DRTs). As we rid ourselves of them, we are able to start a recovery process with the Steps.

Remarkable things happen as we start applying Spiritual Principles. Our lives improve as we start facing many self-made obstacles. As we start getting past these obstacles, our self-worth grows, as does our hope. We find that faith feeds our courage, and it no longer matters if it's a mountain or a molehill we are facing. We know in our hearts we can and will move forward no matter what.

We continue to maintain our ongoing recovery by developing a pattern of meetings, Steps, sharing and listening. Becoming involved, we begin to feel a part of.

When we stop this process and exert self-will, we begin setting ourselves up for relapse. We don't forget what we had learned; we just wallow in self-pity. Self-will is what almost killed us. Relapse is never an accident. Often, others see the signs long before we admit reservations exist in our lives. We find reasons not to go to our regular meetings. We may stop calling the members who know us best. We get angry with the people who love us. In short, we start listening to our addiction, focusing only on the negative.

We became our own Higher Power, our own Group Conscience, our own everything. The disease was winning. We did everything that we heard in the meetings not to do.

Meeting attendance goes away, our spiritual program goes out the door, and we're left standing alone again with feelings of emptiness. Once starting the emotional roller coaster, we fall deeper into desperation, looking for a way out. When this happens, all avenues generally close, and we feel hopeless. Rather than sharing these thoughts with others, we start answering ourselves, therefore setting the stage for failure.

RELAPSE: TO FALL BACK INTO ILLNESS AFTER APPARENT RECOVERY

Just like recovery is a process, relapse is a process.

The mental lapse happens first. It usually begins with thoughts like, "I can skip this meeting. I've got this. I need to take care of family and work first. Those people don't know. I get nothing from those meetings." Then it is followed by the spiritual lapse: "I don't need to pray, work the Steps, call my sponsor, share at meetings, do the next right thing, or be honest about what I'm feeling."

The physical relapse (using) (i.e., I am, I want, I can, I will) happens last. This is why we need to nurture our spirits with a positive attitude on a daily basis.

When recovery is not our priority, we forget how to live clean and fall back into addictive behaviors, often leading to relapse. We must recover or die. We need to watch people, places, and things to guard our recovery and prevent relapse.

When we do not apply the Steps in our lives, we are a mess. We stop following through with commitments. Sometimes we never fully surrender. Other times, after we surrender and have time in recovery, we walk away from the actions and principles that kept us clean.

Relapse is a conscious decision clothed in apathy, complacency, and denial. What starts as random thoughts of dissatisfaction and boredom turns into secrecy, self-obsession, and an action plan to use. The longer that the internal dialogue stays internal, the more we feed oxygen to the fire.

When the question “What if?” takes hold of our thought process, it begins to take up residence in our heads, ultimately to be answered by “Well, maybe” or “I could just do that”. The day comes when “Am I going to use?” is answered by “I don’t know”. At that point, it’s only a matter of time before picking up.

We will either actively seek it out by driving to the dope house, liquor store, or doctor’s office—or we put ourselves into a situation we think we can control. Physical or mental pain may also initiate an obsession to use.

People who live this simple program do not relapse. A relapse can be fatal. Relapse brought us to surrender our will and way to God and this program.

RETURN: TO GO OR COME BACK, AS TO A FORMER PLACE, POSITION, OR STATE. (Dictionary definition)

Coming back to the rooms of NA after a relapse takes great courage. To regain recovery takes a willingness to change, followed by action. We need to accept that if we don’t change, we will only repeat the same behavior. We need to honestly look at how we altered our personal program from when we first got clean to when we relapsed.

What did we stop doing? What excuses did we tell ourselves? What did we put into our lives that was more important than our recovery? Are we now willing to go to any lengths to stay clean?

One day clean is the beginning of hope. Two days clean is the beginning of desire. And three days clean is the beginning of freedom. We often tell ourselves that other members look down on us or dislike us after we relapse. We use this as an excuse to not come back. Yet most members, with time, have been to enough funerals and would much rather have you in a meeting with a chance to start over. We want you back in our lives. We want you to succeed, but you have to be the one to reach out. You must listen to that will to live. After a relapse, it can feel like your spirit is broken, that you will never find the passion and joy you first felt in NA. You may not feel the same as before, but you can find a deeper, firmer resolve with each passing day.

When we stopped trying to hide our hurt and finally let people in, that’s when we started to grow again.

When the pain was great enough, we finally surrendered. We have tried every way we could, and it never worked until we fully surrendered.

“We have never seen a person relapse who lives the Narcotics Anonymous program.”

OUR CHOICES BOIL DOWN TO THIS: RECOVERY OR RELAPSE

One Addict's Experience with Group Conscience through the Steps

This is my experience from years of being involved in a home group since 1979 and be part of developing a Group Conscience without ego being involved. I have learned how to work the steps and put the common welfare of NA first in all our decision-making process. It took years of learning how to develop a relationship with God through the Steps. First surrendering to the 1st Step of NA realizing that I had no power over addiction and that I needed help. Through identifying with others that I had a problem and listening to the group identification of being addicts and their powerlessness over the disease of addiction I became able to accept the 1st Step into my life and become part of NA.

Through the Second Step I practiced surrendering that there was something greater than myself (ourselves) as it states in the Step. I needed something that could help me with being powerless, useless and helpless over the disease of addiction. This is the question I ask myself: How could I experience Group Conscience when I didn't experience and identify that I needed something greater than myself to restore me to sanity? So, I asked the Group how they came to believe in a greater power than themselves. They told me it did not happen overnight, accept to look at where my own power had taken me to. They asked me to be open minded in this search and to remember that this Greater Power had to be loving and caring. Through this guidance I became willing to believe that whatever was keeping the Group clean that this would be the Greater Power that I would seek and that power became G.O.D. (good orderly direction) this is what worked for me. How many times do we seek good orderly direction before we make a decision, or do we rely on our own thinking process without getting direction from those in the Group that have come before us? Do we read and study the Traditions of NA? Do we talk to our sponsor before making decisions about our lives and the direction we are heading in our recovery? Now that I have come to believe in this Greater Power and surrendered my life to seeking direction first before making decisions, I was able to see the need to build a relationship through the 3rd Step with God.

How could I be part of Group Conscience when I did not know how to invite God into my life? How could I seek the direction of God to make sure that it was God's will and not mine being made? I had to learn to turn my will and life over to the care of God first before I could see what was best for the Group, let alone my own life. When an important issue comes up before the Group could I put my own personality aside on an issue? Did I have a need to be heard? Was my thought process more important than that of the other addicts? Did I rely on God's will, did I pray first and invite God into my decision-making process? Was I willing to wait for an answer before I voted on an important issue? How did I know that God had spoken in our decision? Did I collect all information before making a decision? Did I pray for God's direction first and turn everything over to the care of God? The Third Step helps me with an understanding that I needed to do a 4th Step in my life before I could know myself, let alone what was best for the Group. A fear-based decision is a reflection of the past. Have you ever heard: "We need to take action; addicts are going to die"?

This brings the worst out in us, where fear takes control of our emotions and then we react from fear, thinking we are doing what is best for the Fellowship.

Without doing a 4th Step I kept reacting from fear that controlled my life in the past. I can remember when an issue came up before the Home Group to take nar-anon off our meeting list and phone line, how the Home Group got caught up in the emotional side of the issue and could not look at the Traditions for our answers, let alone ask God for help within our Conscience. The members took sides on the issue and fear alone controlled the issue. What was going to happen to nar-anon? They needed our help and addicts were going to die if we did not help those who cared about the addicts? This issue alone brought anger out from the membership/members who did not get what they wanted when the vote was unanimous to remove nar-anon from the phone line and the meeting list. Members left the Group through this issue for not going their way. However, the vote was not to remove them, it was to uphold the Traditions of NA and they all agreed that nar-anon would be removed because it was a violation of the Traditions to affiliate ourselves with them. Two different issues were brought up. The emotions; we could debate our emotions and how we felt. The second was looking at the principles that are in the Traditions that were not debatable which could set us free from the emotional side of the issue. Knowing ourselves and how we react to certain patterns in our lives could help in this area of not reacting through fear, control and anger. Through doing a searching and fearless moral inventory of my self helps me in the area of understanding myself and my reacting to others when they present themselves to Group Conscience. Did you ever hear that someone is having a control issue when they would not let an issue die or come to the table in Group Conscience? How did we react to this? What part did we play in the argument over an issue? Were emotions the reason we voted on an issue?

Did we vote yes or no because we wanted to be accepted by others within the Group? Could we speak out without fear of being judged by others within the Group? How could we participate without knowing ourselves and the patterns of our past and how they affected us in our decision-making process? Did we cast a vote out of fear, anger, resentment, or control? Can we honestly say we have voted without our emotions controlling us on an issue presented to the Group?

That leads us to the 5th Step on admitting to ourselves, God and another human being the exact nature of our wrongs. Can I go back to the group after I have made the mistake of trying to control the group by deciding that they should vote the way that I presented the issue by not presenting the other side? After purposely holding back information because of fear that they might have voted the other way and could not have the ability to see the truth, can I admit to this? Can I admit to myself and to the group and to God that I was controlled by fear and held back information?

Asking God to heal the exact nature of my wrongs and seeing how they affected the group was an eye opener in my life. After seeing how fear controlled me, I could see the need to move onto the 6th step for healing of my defective character. I first had to take an inventory on my involvement with my Home Group and the service that I was involved in performing for the group. Was I able to see myself needing God to heal all areas of my life? Was I willing to take a look at the damage I had done in the name of Group Conscience? Could I be honest with God by asking him to heal me in this area? Was I prepared to be entirely ready to accept Gods healing? I had to first accept that my defect of character had done damage intentional or unintentional to the Group. I had to do inventory and see that I had been participating in trying to control the Group's direction whether or not it was the right direction for the Group to develop as a Group. Could I see the damage that was done by my need to control my environment because of fear? I had to be right at all cost regardless of the result. After feeling left alone in fear I became ready for God to heal my defective character and become humble.

Through the 7th step I could prepare myself to take action on this humility I had found that I could stop acting out on the damage fear had caused. I could pray for God to remove the shortcoming and stop the acting out from fear. Could I surrender my fear that the group was going to be alright by taking a back seat and not having to take all the responsibility on of the group? Could I trust God would protect the group without having to react with anger and paranoia when I felt the group was making the wrong decision by following a strong personality instead of seeking all information before making a decision? Could I trust God when someone pointed out my shortcoming, without reacting defensively? My first reaction is a feeling of a need to protect my ego that I may be wrong and others might be right. Could I surrender my anger, resentments, and my paranoia when I was fearful that we could be making a mistake? When W.S.O. Inc. sent letters to the facility that we held our meeting in, that we were not NA {This was after the court case agreement with Grateful Dave that there was supposed to be joint call for peace in the fellowship by World Service Office, WSC, WSB's and Grateful Dave, Baby Blue Era}. After this happened I asked God to remove the possibility of acting out of anger or from holding resentment for this action. I had grown to a point that I called an emergency area service meeting to share all the information with them that I had received and asked them what action the Groups wanted to take. The letter from World Service Office was sent to all the NA facilities that were in our area and our H-I facility that we were not recognized as an NA area by the World Service Office and were riding on the NA name. We lost our H-I facility, however all our Groups facilities understood that there were differences within an organization and we are still in the same facility 21 years later. I asked God to remove my shortcoming so I did not have to act out by causing more problems within the area that we lived in. God removed the anger, resentment, and the paranoia so I could present all the information without acting out from the fear that I lived in. I had become humble to ask God to remove my shortcoming so I did not have to act out on my defective character. Our group prayed a lot through those dark days of not knowing and we had to ask God to remove our shortcomings so we did not retaliate against those who had attempted to destroy our NA Area and the Groups that belonged to the Area. It took a lot of energy to become humble and ask for Gods help to remove our shortcomings.

How do we make a list of all the addicts we harmed in the name of Group Conscience? First, we have to do an inventory to find out what issue we may have acted out on our defected character or violated the group through our shortcomings. We have to first stop the blaming our problems on others and start to take a look at what part we have played in any given situation and be able to see the damage we have caused in the past so we do not have to make the same mistakes over again. How can we build a list of the addicts and groups we have harmed when we have not done a fellowship inventory on our past? We could bring up all the past violation that we perceive that happened in the past, however how many of us have collected all the information to have a clear picture of the NA history, are we forming broad viewpoints on others addicts opinion without facts to back up what they are saying? After studying history, I have been able to see my part in making mistakes and have been able to build a list of addicts that I have harmed, thinking I was doing the right thing at the time. Did we take the time to collect all information before participating in a collected group conscience? Were we caught up in the fear of what would happen if we did not take action? We owe amends, however if we do not see that we played a part in the damage that has been caused, we are doomed to keep making the same mistakes over and over again. I have been in the process of doing an inventory of my involvement in the home group, area service, regional service, and world service in all areas. The first process I have utilized was collecting and reviewing old minutes of the home group and the addicts that were involved at the time and my involvement in the decision-making process. Was I able to be honest on my involvement with all the decision-making process? Could I see if I damaged anyone with my defect of character? Can I remember the faces of the addicts and their responses to me? Did I collect all information before I participated in Group Conscience? Did I inflict my will on the group? By answering these questions, I was able to build a list of all the addicts and groups of addicts that I have damaged.

Now after completing this list, I have talked to the home group and admitted my mistakes of my past involvement in service and have been providing all information that I receive even if I disagree with it. I have worked on changing myself by looking at my past involvement and not making that same mistake again. The home group has taken action in changing the process that we have followed in the past by taking time before we make a decision. No issue is voted on before we do research on an issue. First, we pray and then we take time to listen to all that are involved in the home group. We invite God into our conscience (We have used the literature prayer in group conscience). We made amends by changing ourselves. We look at the traditions for our answers before we vote on an issue to make sure there is no conflict with our decisions and the spiritual principles. The group has made a decision to follow the traditions and not to negotiate them just to be part of the greater whole. We are participating in a service structure that does not dictate to the groups and is an informational structure that provides the service the groups ask for from them. We hold ourselves accountable to those we serve and ask that we are also held accountable. Part of our amends is communicating before we act without concerns for other groups, we are inclusive not exclusive. The Group we serve believes that a real Group Conscience means that the group has been objectively, thoroughly, and succinctly informed of the probable consequences before taking action on an issue. As a group we carry a message of recovery that no addict need die tonight without hearing that they never have to use again. I have gone to old members that have left the group to admit my faults of my behavior, for my shortcoming and the damage that I have caused to our relationships, with no exceptions. The 9th step is an action step and it is not just reading of the list we have completed. This step needs to be taken seriously and needs to be done in Gods time and not ours. Talk it over with your sponsor and your group before taking action. This process will not be done overnight, if we surrender and let our ego at the door and approach the amends process with humility, there is only healing for yourself and the group. It is not to say that after you complete this amends process that there will not be amends left undone. Sometimes the only amends we can make is by changing ourselves or the Group we participate within.

Does that mean we do not make mistakes if we have done the direct or indirect amends?

Our 10th step tells us that we need to take a daily inventory and promptly admit when we are wrong. As Groups we have to be on guard of that we do not drift away from are primary purpose of carrying the message to the suffering addict. We have to also make sure we are not setting up a caste system or only communicating with like-minded thinkers if we are to be inclusive and not exclusive. We always need to be looking at the traditions if we are to formulate a group conscience to be aware of ourselves on how we treat one another. We need to take inventory of ourselves on a continuing basis so we are aware if we have made a mistake so we can admit as soon as we become aware of it. The hardest thing that we do is admit that when we are wrong, we have to check ourselves at the door and let our ego out of the equation so that you can be our eyes and ears. As Groups we need to take a regular inventory on how we carry the message of Narcotics Anonymous. What does the message mean to us? Do we carry a clear message? As a group are we there to help the addict that is reaching out for help? As a trusted servant of the group I need to be aware of my action in that position. Do I know when I have carried my will and not the Group's? Have I listened to the members of the group, have I heard them? If I have violated them, can I admit to them without trying to defend my action? Do I have the humility to follow the Group Conscience? Can I see myself for truly who I am without a distorted viewpoint of myself? Being made aware of a mistake and admitting them are two different issues. Can I really admit to a wrong without telling the group or another human being that I have wronged them? Do I need a conscience to see my mistakes? Can I admit if I have violated the groups that I served by not being directly responsible when I did not ask the Groups before I took action on their behalf without seeking direction? After taking a daily inventory and promptly admitting when we are wrong, we can see the effects of our mistakes and we can see the benefits of God's Spirit in our rooms, we become aware of God conscience in its greatest work. We can see the spirit come to life within the rooms of Narcotics Anonymous, we can see and feel when we have harmed someone just by looking at their face or body language for we can see their response. We know how we affect someone because we are becoming a spiritual being, we are no longer self-centered beings; we have become God-centered and are prepared for the 11th Step.

The 11th Step talks about the underlying principle of this step are God consciences and are awareness and empathy of other people. Through prayer and meditation, we improve our relationships with God as we understand him. How do we do this as a group? How has your personal relationship with God improved as a result of applying this step? When I first started working the 11th Step, I found that I had been asking God for many of things before, like giving me the power to stay clean, remove the desire to use, to heal my defective character, and to remove my shortcomings. Now the step was asking me to seek God's will through prayer and meditation to improve my conscious contact with him, asking only for knowledge of his will and the power to carry it out. The key words were God's Will, Prayer, Meditation, His Will, and the Power to carry it out. Prayer was talking to God, just like I talked to my sponsor seeking his direction; the meditation was listening for direction for my life, my sponsor would guide me through the steps. So how did I hear God speak to me? How does the group hear God's direction? When we had a silent prayer for the suffering addict at the beginning of the meeting and at the end of the meeting, at times we could feel God's presence in the room when we took the time to reflect on how we carried the message to the suffering addict. We cared and expressed our empathy for the addict through our prayer. The literature prayer in the Basic Text is example of the 11th step in action "God, as we endeavor to complete this work, we know that you are with us. We know that without your strength and inspiration we are not capable of the task before us. We know that this work is not our work, but yours. Each of us, in our own way, humbly petition You and use us as Your tools, according to Your will. We offer ourselves to you in this way knowing that You are a Loving God and have all the power. In this work and in our lives—Thy will be done." We are acknowledging God by expressing that He exists with us, to give us strength and direction to write the Basic Text. We are humbly acknowledging Him that he wrote the Book that we're only instruments of His Will. We gained God's knowledge through this prayer and his direction in what we wrote, it was a group prayer and group meditation seeking God's Will in all we wrote. How powerful of an example is that for our fellowship as every addict participates within a Group Conscience to utilize our groups to carry out our tasks before us to make our message available to all addicts, that they may not die before they hear that recovery is available to them, that no addict need die of the horrors of addiction without having the opportunity that was made available to us. How powerful can prayer be to take an addict who was totally self-centered to become God-centered that we are able to care that much about another human being's suffering? I had a friend that when he shared, he would share that we should take our shoes and dust off our feet, that we were walking on hallowed ground, that were in God's presence. How do we know that we are doing God's work? How do we know it is His Will? It shares in the Basic Text that spiritual principles are never in conflict with any of the traditions of NA so would God's will be? Does it mean that God's Will, will never be in conflict with our spirit? How do we know when God is answering our prayers? Our home group conscience meeting is seeking Gods direction through prayer and meditation on how He wants us to carry the message, that He gives us the power to carry His will out and not ours. We know when there is conflict, we need to put the issue on the back burner, to God directs us to complete his tasks in God's time and not ours. I look at the 11th step as becoming a living prayer through our actions, and our actions reflects our ability to carry out God's Will without conflict. Are we in conflict with our inner self? Do we have peace within, has the noise stopped? Has our prayer life improved? Can I sit and just be still? Does our ear have the ability to hear God from within? As groups are we aware of our surrounding within the meeting? As groups do we connect spiritually with our members? As a group we know when we are within God Consciousness, we can feel when we have made decisions that God has not been involved in the decision-making process, we do not have to be told, and we can feel the effects of being out of God's Will. As a result of the 11th step and direction of God's Will we are ready for the 12th step.

We had a spiritual awaking as a result of those steps, I am using the word those because that was the word in our early literature utilized, and it is what makes sense of how I am writing from my experience with the previous steps. The first step is our first contact with being awoken spiritually, we came into the NA fellowship spiritually broken and needed to be brought back to life. That is where we first experienced love of the fellowship making us feel like we were the most important person at the meeting. We started to feel human that someone cared about us for who we were instead of what we had; we were spiritually coming to life as we experienced surrender to recovery. We finally were able to identify with people like us that could help us with our problem (Recovery from Addiction), we were no longer alone.

The second step brought us an understanding that there was a Greater Power than ourselves that could restore us to sanity. Our spirit started to believe in the group and what was working for them. We did not have to live with the insanity any longer, where desperation was replaced with hope for the first time. We started to have faith in something greater than ourselves; we no longer had to be the center of our world.

Step Three: we started to be able to make decisions with the help of others; we were able to practice our newfound faith with the ability to turn our lives over to the care of God as we understood him. Just too be able to believe in a God through the help of others emphasized an excitement to our lives. The practice of simple prayer started to bring calmness to our very existence and feel worthwhile at last.

Step 4: brought an awareness of a conscience of God to be able to help us with the ability for us to be honest with the task before us. We were able to take a thorough searching and moral inventory of ourselves for the first time. To have the ability to feel that we had a conscience; it made us understand that we were part of the human race and uplifted our spirit. To know that we no longer had to carry the baggage of our past sets us free to look at our ability to care about the addict and ourselves, that we had assets in our lives.

In the 5th Step through having an ability to admit to another human being, ourselves and God showed that our self-centered action started to change to a God- centered person. Our spirit moved us to take responsibility for our exact nature of our wrongs which stemmed from being self-centered instead of being God-centered. We were no longer enslaved to the past, we could continue on the process of developing our conscience with a loving God through changing and taking responsibility for ourselves in recovery.

Through the 6th step we are able to seek God's help in the change of our personality. We are acknowledging that prayer is important part of that change in the acceptance for the need for help in healing our defect of character (flawed personality). "I Can't, We Can".

The 7th step is a continuing journey of humility in action in our lives. Surrendering process at a deeper level is what we are witnessing, to see our need for acceptances of God to heal us at a deeper level. We are able to see the change from acting out when we didn't have the ability without the help of God to remove our shortcomings.

In the 8th step we take responsibility for our past and our actions and the part that we played in every situation in our lives. Through prayer and talking with our sponsor we are able to take a look at our defect and the damage we did to others without blaming others for our actions.

With the 9th step we are able to start the process of repairing the damage we have done over the years. God has awoken us to understand that we have damaged others with our self-centered nature and now we have to amend our past mistakes. The spiritual awareness of this step is that we know that the greatest amends we can make is changing ourselves so we stop harming others and to continue to make direct amends as long as it does not harm ourselves or others. We need to have the spiritual awareness to know if we have to make direct or indirect amends.

Through the 10th step we are spiritually motivated to continue a daily inventory of ourselves to keep the process of growing as a spiritual being. By knowing ourselves and our patterns we are able to know if we have done wrong and do have to continue the damage that our patterns of the past have showed. We can admit it the minute we've become aware of our wrongs and repair them before there is irreversible damage done.

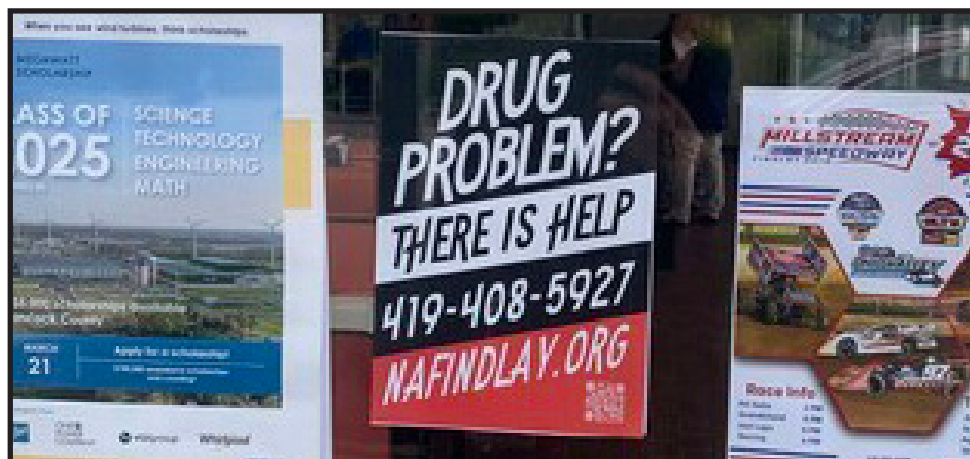

In the 11th step we acknowledge God's power and his relationship we have developed through the process of the steps that we want to continue building this relationship through prayer and meditation to improve our conscious contact with God. We have grown spiritually that we want his power and will to direct our lives and want to be humble to carry out his will in all areas of our lives. We have developed an attitude of being a living prayer through those steps.

After having had a spiritual awakening as a result of those steps we tried to carry the message to addicts. How do we carry the message to addicts? I had to ask myself that question I talked it over with my sponsor and my home group I belong to. I was told the best way was to participate in the home group that I was a member of. I had to share that message that I had been living as a direct result of the steps and the life that they had been given to me. I had found freedom from active addiction and that I did not have to use that day, I was no longer enslaved to the disease; I had found freedom in the rooms of NA. What more did I need to do? I had to become available to give of my time to help the suffering addict who wanted help. I had to continue to participate practicing the principles of the steps in my life; however, the principles I came to understand that we needed to practice in our daily affairs, were I needed to involve myself in the learning of the Twelve Traditions through the process of belonging to a home group. The group was the best place for a recovering addict to participate in the carrying of the message of NA. I heard of 12 step work so often and that you do not do a Twelve Step call by yourself, that you needed another addict to go with you when you participated in twelve step calls. That is where the Traditions come into play because the Traditions gave us principles that needed to be carried out when involved in service. As a result of becoming God-centered I needed to become involved in his greater purpose of making recovery more available and where would be a better place than the home group and the service it provided. It talked about becoming involved in Group conscience, how I could become involved in group conscience if I had not worked the steps and developed a relationship with God of our understanding? I had to practice all the principles I had learned from the steps and also have to learn the principles of the Traditions to carry out our message. How do we communicate through the group if we haven't lived the steps? We had to have developed our own conscience so we can participate in a Group conscience. Group conscience demands that we put our ego aside for the betterment of the group. We have to become selfless to be of service to help the suffering addict who wants help. How do we participate in service if we are not selfless? Do we do service as a direct result of living the steps? Have you had a spiritual awaking first before you have done service? I have asked myself these questions and all service that I am involved in, is a direct result of living the twelve steps of NA. I also know the difference of doing service as a result of brief periods of gratitude before I worked the steps and the difference of doing service as a direct result of having had a spiritual awaking as a result of working the steps. Thank God for allowing me to be of service today.

“God, as we endeavor to complete this work, we know that you are with us. We know that without your strength and inspiration we are not capable of the task before us. We know that this work is not our work, but yours. Each of us, in our own way, humbly petition You and use us as your tools, according to Your will. We offer ourselves to you in this way knowing that You are Loving God and have all the power. In this work and in our lives—Thy will be done.”
